→ THE CHASTEL SITE

The name of the site evokes the role played by this steep relief as a natural refuge, although any trace of the defence has disappeared. The church, built in the 12th-13th centuries, is dedicated to Saint-Floret, one of the first bishops of Auvergne, who gave the municipality its name. Formed by a single nave and a flat chevet, the sanctuary is flanked by three chapels and a late wooden-framed porch. After the transfer of the castle to the valley, this sanctuary was not neglected by the lords of Saint-Floret who kept their graves there. The north funeral chapel has a painted decoration of the late 14th century, displaying the family of Jehan de Saint-Floret presented to the Virgin by St. John-Baptist. Preceded by Stations of the Cross, the church was also a parish seat, as evidenced by the presence of the cemetery, which preserves an exceptional group of tombs, dominated by an ossuary. Dating is difficult, but these now empty cavities could have been used from the early Middle Ages to the 14th century.

→ THE SPRING OF THE LION'S HEAD

There are numerous springs in the Pays d'Issoire, on the banks of the Allier and its affluents: they are ven spread out in real processions along the Couze d'Ardes and Couze Pavin. In the scientific bubbling of the 19th century, we owe to Henri Lecoq, director of the museum of the same name in Clermont-Ferrand, the nickname of «Lion's Head» given to the «griffin» of the Saint-Foret spring that dominates the Couze Pavin with its astonishing limestone and ferruginous concretions and its stalactites.

Go down to Saint-Floret by the grassy path, to the right of the hill (Way of the Cross and halfway down the hill, stone cross engraved with a heart, view over the village and the castle). At the road, turn right, cross the Couze on the footbridge, and follow the road on the left to reach the starting point.
